This week: "Did you know?"

Marie Howland arrived in Fairhope on March 1, 1899.

In honor of March and Women's History Month, this week's spotlight is dedicated to a strong woman who had a significant impact on our community.

Fairhope's first library was opened in the home of Marie Howland in the spring of 1900, a little over a year after she arrived, and less than five and a half years after the first Fairhoppers came ashore. She served as the Associate Editor of the Fairhope Courier, and was highly involved in the community. Her 1921 obituary celebrates her memory, "...she was for many years one of the Colony's most devoted members..."

Marie is buried in the Fairhope Single Tax Corporation Colony Cemetery on the northwest side, near the mausoleum. For more information about Marie Howland and other women and men who played important roles in Fairhope's history, explore the Fairhope Single Tax Corporation archives at <https://fairhopesingletax.pastperfectonline.com>
